Course Description:
The course provides a basic chronology and interpretations of American culture from 1890-2000. We will "read" primary texts of autobiographies, photographs, movies, novels, and music. These will be analyzed within a framework that emphasizes four large patterns of the 20th century: shift from a producer to consumer culture; U.S. rise to international economic, military, and cultural dominance; assertions of identities based on race, gender, ethnicity, and sexuality; and tensions between private liberty and public obligation. The course requires two short essays, a mid-term, final exam, and regular participation in weekly discussion sections.

Course Description:
This course will examine the experience of women in the United States during the late 19th and 20th centuries, to understand how gender shapes social, economic and political roles. This exploration will include the impact of class, religion, race, and ethnicity on women’s role on men.
AMST 144.80  Historical Geography of North America  Grim
CRN# 25663  1957 E 111
M 4:10-6:00

Course Description:
An overview of the changing geography of North America, focusing primarily on the United States experience from the 16th century to beginning of the 20th century. For the colonial period, there will be an emphasis on aerial variation and the formation of regional economies and distinctive settlement patterns. For the 19th century, the focus will be on settlement expansion west of the Appalachians and the socio-economic development of the United States in comparison with the Canadian experience, discussing such topics as immigration, economic activity, industrialization, transportation, and urbanization. Several projects, utilizing cartographic and historical geographical resources available on the Internet are an integral part of course requirements.

AMST 145.80  American Folk Art  Vlach
CRN# 25790  MPA 310
MW 11:00 –12:15pm

Course Description:
This course will present an overview of American folk art traditions with a sequences of lectures organized by artistic media. Several examples within each medium will be discussed to illustrate significant aspects of historical development, cultural variation, technical expertise, and/or creative innovation. Lectures will all be illustrated with slides (some films may be shown as well) and we may also have some visiting specialists give presentations. We will also be making a field trip to a museum to view works of art in person. Students will be expected to attend class regularly, take exams, and prepare a research paper (ca. 15 pages) on any subject related to American folk art. Course grades will be determined in the following manner: Mid-term =20%, Final Exam = 30%, Paper = 40%, class discussion = 10%.

AMST 167.80  Environmental History  Mergen
CRN# 25797  1957 E 111
W 04:10 – 06:00pm

Course Description:
This course will examine American attitudes toward nature and the physical environment over the past 200 years with an emphasis on the conflicts that have arisen between aesthetic and spiritual values and economic and technological development. We will pay particular attention to the changing definitions of nature, wilderness, and natural resources. Readings will be assigned from Carolyn Merchant, ed. MAGOR PROBLEMS IN AMERICAN ENVIRONMENTAL HISTORY and Robert Finch & John Elder, eds. THE NORTON BOOK OF NATURE WRITING. Two short (8-10) papers are required, one a review of a book, exhibition, or film selected from a list of recommended works, the other an essay on a place or personal experience with nature. Field trips and field screenings will be arranged.

AMST 168.10  Cultural Criticism in America  Drown
CRN# 23925  MPA 302
TR 11:00 – 12:15pm

Course Description:
This seminar introduces students to major methods for understanding and interpreting cultural materials. We will explore how and why culture particularly mass culture like film, music and television, is such a significant aspect of our lives. Different units in the course will examine 1) the institutions (corporations and individuals) that produce culture, 2) the ideological messages that circulate in cultural products and 3) how different audiences interpret the culture they consume. This course in writing-intensive and discussion oriented. American Studies majors by permission of instructor.

AMST 176.80 American Architecture Longstreth
CRN# 22688 MW 2:00-3:15pm 1957 E B12
Course Description:
Examination of selected aspects of the built environment in the United States from the first period of European settlement to the eve of the Civil War. Stylistic properties, from type characteristics, technological developments, and urbanistic patterns are introduced as vehicles for interpreting the historical significance of this legacy. Buildings are analyzed both as artifacts and as signifiers of broader social, cultural, and economic tendencies. Other topics introduced include the role of the designer, the influence of region, and architecture as an aspect of landscape.

AMST 180.10 Proseminar in American Studies Palmer
CRN# 22689 T 4:10-6:00pm MPA 302
Course Description:

AMST 186.80 US Urban History Heap
CRN# 25767 TR 12:30 –1:20pm MPA B07
Course Description:
This course explores the history of U.S. urban life and culture, focusing on the period since the late nineteenth century when a majority of Americans have lived either in urban centers or in the suburban developments that sprang up around them. Approaching the American city as a contested cultural terrain, we will analyze the urban politics of race, class, gender and sexuality; the changing definition of urban work and its effects on life in the city; the reconfiguration of urban space, including the development of parks, apartment buildings and public housing; social and moral reform efforts to police the city and its inhabitants; the role of mass culture and public amusements in shaping urban experience; the rise of popular urban discontent; the increasing tendency toward suburbanization; and the so-called “disintegration” of urban neighborhoods. Although course readings will examine these dynamics in a variety of American cities, students will be encouraged to use this scholarship to develop a more complex understanding of their own urban surroundings and will be required to take a historical walking tour of one Washington, D.C. neighborhood. Class time will consist of two weekly lectures. and one smaller section meeting where students will discuss the week’s assigned readings and films.

Course Description:
This seminar explores selected topics in home and family life in America from the colonial period to the present within an American Studies and historical intellectual framework using the lens of material culture: architecture, spaces, furnishings, utensils, technological systems, and artifacts associated with ritual. Through museum collections, exhibits, and readings, we will consider a range of issues including ideal and actual standards of living, family structures and ideology, life stages, rituals, foodways, community, and museum interpretation. Particular focus will be given to the home as a place for constructing and performing social identity (ethnicity, class, gender, race, religion); reproducing and contesting the social and political order; and producing and consuming goods and services.
AMST 257.80  Seminar: American Folklife  Vlach
CRN# 25195  W 4:10-6:00pm  1957 E 111
Course Description:
This course will present the materials of American folk culture concentrating particularly on folk architecture, folk crafts, and folk art. The major organizing themes for the course are regionalism and the use of objects as indicators of cultural intention. During the first half of the course we will assess the entire nation in terms of architectural expression. This will be followed by a topical consideration of insights to be gained by the analysis of objects in their social contexts. Readings and a major term paper.

AMST 269.80  American Cultural History  Heap
CRN# 25776  W 6:10-8:00pm  P201
Course Description:
This graduate-level readings seminar combines historical and theoretical approaches to the study of 20th-century culture in the United States. The course will explore the relationship between mass-produced cultural products, the rise of visual culture, concepts of modernity and post-modernity, and the construction of identities in the United States--including, but not limited to, identities defined by race, gender, sexuality, religion, and nation.

AMST 276.10  Economics of Preservation  Wagner
CRN# 25794  R 6:10-8:00pm  P201
Course Description:
This course will develop skills in real estate analysis and preservation economics, focusing on basic techniques necessary to understand financial pro formas, market studies, financing techniques, incentive programs and economic studies related to preservation of the built environment. Students will have the opportunity to examine economic impact models as they are applied to preservation of historic structures and districts.

AMST 278.80  Historic Preservation  Longstreth
CRN# 25795  MW 4:10-6:00pm  P 201
Course Description:
This course investigates selected aspects of contemporary preservation practice in the U.S. Topics examined include the survey and documentation of historic properties, the nature of historic districts and the changes to which they are subjected over time, the bearing of physical context for historic properties, the meanings of significance in historic preservation and the criteria by which it is determined, and the implications of new design within a preservation framework.

The primary focus of this course is on physical aspects of preservation and on the broad issues these aspects represent. While class lectures and discussions will address these concerns in a general way, the opportunity to explore some matters in detail and out in the field will be afforded by the semester assignment.

AMST 284.10  Am Photo: Theory & Practice  Goodyear
CRN# 23926  T 6:10-8:00  P201
Course Description:
Over the course of the last one hundred and sixty years, photography has emerged as the dominant visual medium in American society. Photographic images have played a central role in mediating our understanding of the different social, political, and cultural landscapes in America. This graduate seminar will consider the many ways in which photography has been practiced by individuals, theorized by visual culture scholars, and incorporated into American life. We will look especially at the unique nature of the medium and interrogate the different traditions and usages that have grown up around it. Readings will comprise a selection of recent books on the theory and practice of photography in America.

In addition to the weekly reading assignments, each student will be required to deliver three in-class reports. Approximately ten minutes each in length, these presentations should provide the class with a critical summary of the subject or book that you chose. The topics for these reports include a photographic process or format (Week 2), a photographic history survey (Week 3), and an additional book of your choice (Week to be determined).

Students will be required to complete two writing assignments. The first assignment is a five-page critical review of the book you chose to report on. This essay will be due one week after your in-class report. It is expected that this essay will be more than a summary of the book’s contents, but will be rather a paper that interrogates its methods and conclusions. Each student will also research and write a 15 to 20 page essay on an original topic in this field. During the final three weeks of the semester, students will have an opportunity to present their research to the class.

AMST 287.80 US Urban History Heap
CRN# 25778 TR 12:30-1:20pm 1957 E B12
